Ⅳ. 次の英文を読んで、設問に答えなさい。

It was an ordinary day for Casey Fischer as she made her way to get some coffee from *Dunkin Donuts. Casey had no idea that what was about to happen would change her life, and (1) that of complete strangers, forever.

Casey made her way into the store, noticing a homeless man picking up *change outside. Casey told *HuffPost:

*“Eventually I saw him *stroll into Dunkin, as he was counting his change to buy something. I began to get super *annoying and talked to him over and over again even when he didn't really want to talk. Since he had maybe $1 in change, I bought him a coffee and bagel and asked him to sit down with me.”*

Casey ended up sitting with the homeless man, who told her his name was Chris, for over an hour, chatting about life and how he ended up homeless and on the street.

He told me a lot about how people are usually very mean to him because he's homeless, how drugs turned him into the person he hated, he lost his mom to cancer, he never knew his dad and he just wants to be someone his mom would be proud of ...

Casey had to get back to class, but before she left, Chris handed her (2) a crumpled-up piece of paper. She took the paper and they said their goodbyes. (3) Casey had no idea what she was about to read, nor how her simple act of kindness had impacted Chris. Opening up the paper, Casey read something profound and truly heartbreaking – the note inside said:

I wanted to kill myself today. Because of you, I now do not. Thank you, beautiful person.

Casey posted her story on her Facebook Page, where it reached thousands of people, reminding many to be kind always. Many people commented their own stories, some were homeless themselves.

Choosing to be kind is not a hard choice to make. We never know what someone else is *dealing with or what they may be *going through. (4) One simple act of kindness, even as simple as buying someone a cup of coffee and listening to them, could change their lives forever.
